its premises with self-sacrifice, diligence, courage and tranquility. Rabbi Moshe Bleicher, shlita, the head of the yeshiva, set the educational-national goal of establishing a generation of Torah scholars worthy of becoming spiritual leaders.

Having absorbed the Torah of Hevron, these scholars will be able to use their deep faith and halachic knowledge in order to guide this generation through an understanding of the heart and needs of the Jewish People. We see special value in the fact that the message of unity of educational-national aims comes forth from the city of our Forefathers. Here, in Hevron, the roots of our unity as people were laid by our Forefathers who lived here and are buried here.

The fast and steady growth of the Yeshiva caused a need for the renovation and expansion of the Yeshiva situated in the old Beit Romano building (built over 120 years ago). Today, we are in the midst of the construction work.

Yeshiva Shavei Hevron is situated in the Beit Romano building in the midst of the holy city of Hevron.

Beit Romano was built in 1876 by the wealthy Turkish Jew, Avraham Romano. The building became a Torah center during the lifetime of Rebbe Chezkiya Medini (ztz"l), know as the "Sde Chemed", who dwelled in it and even established a yeshiva within its walls.

Later, the Beit Romano building was purchased by Rebbe Shalom Beer from Lubavitch, who founded the first Chabad yeshiva in Eretz Yisrael on its premises. During the disturbances of 1929, the building was used by the British police and all of those injured in the rioting were gathered at Beit Romano before their evacuation from the city. During the Jordanian rule, this structure served as a school for girls.

As the result of the stabbing of David Kapulsky in the vicinity of the Beit Romano building in the year 1981, the school was evacuated and the building was returned to Jewish hands who returned the voice of Torah within its walls by establishing a yeshiva.

The year, 1968, witnessed the re-establishment of the Jewish settlement in Hevron when a group headed by Rav Moshe Levinger returned to the area . Thus, Kiryat Arba was established.

One night in the year 1980, a group of women, led by Rabbanit Miriam Levinger entered the Beit Haddasah building in the heart of Hevron. Thus, the Jewish presence in Hevron was re-established.

The murder of six youths at Beit Haddasah one Shabbat evening in May of that year, caused the desire to establish a yeshiva in the ancient city to be rekindled. Jewish leaders in the area took the first steps in establishing what is now, Yeshiva Shavei Hevron.

And the Sons Return to their Borders

In 1982, under the leadership of Rabbi Moshe Bleicher sh'lita, ten students entered the old Beit Romano building and began their Torah studies. Among the initial group of students was Asher Aharon Gross (z"l), who was murdered in Hevron at the end of that year by Arab terrorists.

Despite the grave difficulties of the yeshiva's first years, Rav Moshe Bleicher, sh'lita, held fast to his vision of hundreds of boys learning within the confines of the Beit Midrash in the City of our Forefathers.

Then and Forever

Today, 25 years after its founding, the yeshiva can now boast of 250 students, 70 of who are married students. The yeshiva has expanded and founded other institutions under its auspices which include hundreds of students learning in the surrounding region of Kiryat Arba and Har Hevron. The Beit Romano building now towers over other buildings in Hevron, as upper stories have been added to it. More additions and expansions to the building are planned in the future.

About the Yeshiva

Over the last 32 years, Yeshiva Shavei Hevron has been developing in the heart of the city of Hevron. Today, over 300 students, including 80 married students, learn on its premises with self-sacrifice, diligence, courage and tranquility. Rabbi Moshe Bleicher, shlita, the head of the yeshiva, set the educational-national goal of establishing a generation of Torah scholars worthy of becoming spiritual leaders.

Having absorbed the Torah of Hevron, these scholars will be able to use their deep faith and halachic knowledge in order to guide this generation through an understanding of the heart and needs of the Jewish People. How to Kill Goyim and Influence People: Israeli Rabbis Defend Book's Shocking Religious Defense of Killing Non-Jews (with Video)

A rabbinical guidebook for killing non-Jews has sparked an uproar in Israel and exposed the power a bunch of genocidal theocrats wield over the government.

How to Kill Goyim and Influence People: Israeli Rabbis Defend Book's Shocking Religious Defense of Killing Non-Jews (with Video) | Alternet

When I went into the Jewish religious book emporium, Pomeranz, in central Jerusalem to inquire about the availability of a book called Torat Ha'Melech, or the King's Torah, a commotion immediately ensued. "Are you sure you want it?" the owner, M. Pomeranz, asked me half-jokingly. "The Shabak [Israel's internal security service] is going to want a word with you if you do." As customers stopped browsing and began to stare in my direction, Pomeranz pointed to a security camera affixed to a wall. "See that?" he told me. "It goes straight to the Shabak!"

As soon as it was published late last year, Torat Ha'Melech sparked a national uproar. The controversy began when an Israeli tabloid panned the book's contents as "230 pages on the laws concerning the killing of non-Jews, a kind of guidebook for anyone who ponders the question of if and when it is permissible to take the life of a non-Jew." According to the book's author, Rabbi Yitzhak Shapira, "Non-Jews are "uncompassionate by nature" and should be killed in order to "curb their evil inclinations." "If we kill a gentile who has violated one of the seven commandments... there is nothing wrong with the murder," Shapira insisted. Citing Jewish law as his source (or at least a very selective interpretation of it) he declared: "There is justification for killing babies if it is clear that they will grow up to harm us, and in such a situation they may be harmed deliberately, and not only during combat with adults."

In January, Shapira was briefly detained by the Israeli police, while two leading rabbis who endorsed the book, Dov Lior and Yaakov Yosef, were summoned to interrogations by the Shabak. However, the rabbis refused to appear at the interrogations, essentially thumbing their noses at the state and its laws. And the government did nothing. The episode raised grave questions about the willingness of the Israeli government to confront the ferociously racist swathe of the country's rabbinate. "Something like this has never happened before, even though it seems as if everything possible has already happened," Israeli commentator Yossi Sarid remarked with astonishment. "Two rabbis [were] summoned to a police investigation, and announc[ed] that they will not go. Even settlers are kind enough to turn up."

In response to the rabbis' public rebuke of the state's legal system, the Israeli Attorney General and Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu kept silent. Indeed, since the publication of Torat Ha'Melech, Netanyahu has strenuously avoided criticizing its contents or the author's leading supporters. Like so many prime ministers before him, he has been cowed into submission by Israel's religious nationalist community. But Netanyahu appears to be particularly impotent. His weakness stems from the fact that the religious nationalist right figures prominently in his governing coalition and comprises a substantial portion of his political base. For Netanyahu, a confrontation with the rabid rabbis could amount to political suicide, or could force him into an alliance with centrist forces who do not share his commitment to the settlement enterprise in the West Bank.

On August 18, a pantheon of Israel's top fundamentalist rabbis flaunted their political power during an ad hoc congress they convened at Jerusalem's Ramada Renaissance hotel. Before an audience of 250 supporters including the far-right Israeli Knesset member Michael Ben-Ari, the rabbis declared in the name of the Holy Torah that would not submit to any attempt by the government to regulate their political activities -- even and especially if those activities included inciting terrorist attacks against non-Jews. As one wizened rabbi after another rose up to inveigh against the government's investigation of Torat Ha'Melech until his voice grew hoarse, the gathering degenerated into calls for murdering not just non-Jews, but secular Jews as well.

"The obligation to sacrifice your life is above all others when fighting those who wish to destroy the authority of the Torah," bellowed Rabbi Yehoshua Shapira, head of the yeshiva in the Tel Aviv suburb of Ramat Gan. "It is not only true against non-Jews who are trying to destroy it but against Jewish people from any side."

The government-funded terror academy

The disturbing philosophy expressed in Torat Ha'Melech emerged from the fevered atmosphere of a settlement called Yitzhar located in the northern West Bank near the Palestinian city of Nablus. Shapira leads the settlement's Od Yosef Chai yeshiva, holding sway over a small army of fanatics who are eager to lash out at the Palestinians tending to their crops and livestock in the valleys below them. One of Shapira's followers, an American immigrant named Jack Teitel, has confessed to murdering two innocent Palestinians and attempting to kill the liberal Israeli historian Ze'ev Sternhell with a mail bomb. Teitel is suspected of many more murders, including an attack on a Tel Aviv gay community center.

Despite its apparent role as a terror training institute, Od Yosef Chai has raked in nearly fifty thousand dollars from the Israeli Ministry of Social Affairs since 2007, while the Ministry of Education has pumped over 250 thousand dollars into the yeshiva's coffers between 2006 and 2007. The yeshiva has also benefited handsomely from donations from a tax-exempt American non-profit called the Central Fund of Israel. Located inside the Marcus Brothers Textiles store in midtown Manhattan, the Central Fund transferred at least thirty thousand to Od Yosef Chai between 2007 and 2008.

Though he does not name "the enemy" in the pages of his book, Shapira's longstanding connection to terrorist attacks against Palestinian civilians exposes the true identity of his targets. In 2006, Shapira was briefly held by Israeli police for urging his supporters to murder all Palestinians over the age of 13. Two years later, according to the Israeli daily Haaretz, he signed a rabbinical letter in support of Israeli Jews who had brutally assaulted two Arab youths on the country's Holocaust Remembrance Day. That same year, Shapira was arrested under suspicion that he helped orchestrate a rocket attack against a Palestinian village near Nablus. Though he was released, Shapira's name arose in connection with another act of terror, when in January, the Israeli police raided his settlement seeking the vandals who set fire to a nearby mosque. After arresting ten settlers, the Shabak held five of Shapira's confederates under suspicion of arson.

Friends in high places

Despite his longstanding involvement in terrorism, or perhaps because of it, Shapira counts Israel's leading fundamentalist rabbis among his supporters. His most well-known backer is Dov Lior the leader of the Shavei-Hevron yeshiva at Kiryat Arba, a radical Jewish settlement near the occupied Palestinian city of Hebron and a hotbed of Jewish terrorism. Lior has vigorously endorsed Torat

Ha'Melech, calling it "very relevant, especially in this time."

Lior's enthusiasm for Shapira's tract stems from his own eliminationist attitude toward non-Jews. For example, while Lior served as the IDF's top rabbi, he instructed soldiers: "There is no such thing as civilians in wartime... A thousand non-Jewish lives are not worth a Jew's fingernail!" Indeed, there are only a few non-Jews whose lives Lior would demand to be spared. They are captured Palestinian militants who, as he once suggested, could be used as subjects for live human medical experiments.

Otherwise, Lior appears content to watch Palestinians perish as they did at the muzzle of Dr. Baruch Goldstein's machine gun in 1994. Goldstein, who massacred 29 Palestinians and wounded 150 in a shooting spree while they prayed in Hebron's Cave of the Patriarchs mosque, was a compatriot and neighbor of Lior in the settlement of Kiryat Arba. At Goldstein's funeral, Lior celebrated the massacre as an act carried out "to sanctify the holy name of God." He then extolled Goldstein as "a righteous man." Thanks to Lior's efforts, a shrine to Goldstein was constructed in center of Kiryat Arba so that locals could celebrate the killer's deeds and pass his legacy down to future generations.

Though Lior's inflammatory statements resulted in his being barred from running for election to the Supreme Rabbinical Council, according to journalist Daniel Estrin, the rabbi remains "a respected figure among many mainstream Zionists." By extension, he maintains considerable influence among religious elements in the IDF. In 2008, when the IDF's chief rabbi, Brigadier General Avichai Ronski, brought a group of military intelligence officers to Hebron for a special tour, he concluded the day with a private meeting with Lior, who was allowed to reveal the officers with his views on modern warfare -- "no such thing as civilians in wartime."

Besides Lior, Torat Ha'Melech has earned support from another nationally prominent fundamentalist rabbi: Yaakov Yosef. Yosef is the leader of the Hazon Yaakov Yeshiva in Jerusalem and a former member of Knesset. Perhaps more significantly, he is the son of Ovadiah Yosef, the former chief rabbi of Israel and spiritual leader of the Shas Party that forms a key segment of Netanyahu's governing coalition.

Yaakov Yosef has brought his influence to bear in defense of Torat Ha'Melech, insisting at the August 18 convention in Jerusalem that the book was no different than the Hagadah that all Jews read from on the holiday of Passover. The Hagadah contains passages about killing non-Jews and so does the Bible, Yosef reminded his audience. "Does anyone want to change the Bible?" he asked.

Bibi buckles

Only days before direct negotiations in Washington between Israel and the Palestinian Authority planned for early September, Yaakov Yosef's 89-year-old father, Ovadiah delivered his weekly sermon. With characteristic vitriol, he declared: "All these evil people should perish from this world... God should strike them with a plague, them and these Palestinians."

The remarks have sparked an international furor and earned a stern rebuke from Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat. "While the PLO is ready to resume negotiations in seriousness and good faith," Erekat remarked, "a member of the Israeli government is calling for our destruction."

Palestinian Israeli member of Knesset Jamal Zehalka subsequently demanded that the Israeli Attorney General Yehuda Weinstein put Yosef on trial for incitement. "If, heaven forbid, a Muslim spiritual leader were to make anti-Jewish comments of this sort," Zehalka said, "he would be arrested immediately."

Here was a perfect opportunity for Netanyahu to demonstrate sincerity about negotiations by shedding an extremist ally in the name of securing peace. All he had to do was forcefully reject Yosef's genocidal comments -- a feat made all the easier by the White House's condemnation of the rabbi.

But the Israeli Prime Minister ducked for political cover instead, issuing a canned statement instead of a condemnation. "Rabbi Ovadiah Yosef's remarks do not reflect Netanyahu's views," the statement read, "nor do they reflect the position of the Israeli government."

By refusing to cut Yosef loose, his party remains a central actor in the Israeli government. Thus the statement by Netanyahu was not only weak. It was false.

Rabbi Lior: Jewish law permits destruction of Gaza to bring safety to Israel - Operation Protective Edge - Jerusalem Post

Rabbi Dov Lior, a national- religious leader and the chief rabbi of Kiryat Arba and Hebron, published a letter on Monday saying that Jewish law permits destroying the entire Gaza Strip to bring peace to the south of the country.

Lior said that he had received questions about whether Jewish law permits harming a civilian population not directly involved with the combatants.

He first cited the opinion of the Maharal of Prague, a renowned 16th-century rabbi, who wrote that a nation under attack can wage a fierce war against the assaulting nation, and that it is not obligated regarding the safety of people who are personally involved in hostilities.

“At a time of war, the nation under attack is allowed to punish the enemy population with measures it finds suitable, such as blocking supplies or electricity, as well as shelling the entire area according to the army minister’s judgment, and not to needlessly endanger soldiers but rather to take crushing deterring steps to exterminate the enemy,” Lior wrote.

Addressing the hostilities with Hamas, the rabbi continued to say that “in the case of Gaza, it would be permitted for the defense minister to even order the destruction of all of Gaza so that the South will no longer suffer and to prevent injury to our people, who have been suffering for so long from the enemies surrounding us.”

“Talk of humanitarianism and consideration are nothing when weighed against saving our brothers in the South and across the country and the restoration of quiet to our land,” he said.

Meretz chairwoman Zehava Gal-On condemned Lior’s comments and called on the attorney- general to open an investigation against him for incitement.

“Rabbi Dov Lior’s racist comments have for some time not been in the realm freedom of speech. We’re talking about a man who praises mass murder, who stands behind those who murder innocents and who took part in the incitement that led to the murder of a prime minister,” Gal-On said in reference to prime minister Yitzhak Rabin, who was assassinated in 1995.

“These type of comments aren’t made in an empty space, but constitute an inseparable part of the dangerous and tempestuous atmosphere prevailing in Israeli society in recent weeks,” she said.

“There is therefore a real concern that these comments will become a genuine threat to the lives of more innocent people.

These are not words of incitement written on the Web by anonymous sources, but by a chief rabbi in Israel, and therefore they must be addressed with appropriate severity.”

Lior once wrote an approbation for a book called The King’s Torah that was co-written in 2009 by radical settler figure Rabbi Yitzhak Shapira, which permitted killing civilian non- Jews in times of war.

He was summoned by police for questioning on grounds of incitement to violence but refused to report for questioning, saying the Torah was not open to police investigation. He was subsequently arrested and brought for questioning but no charges were made.

"in the case of Gaza, it would be permitted for the defense minister to even order the destruction of all of Gaza..."

So Harav Lior was guilty for inciting the Defense Minister? Had he have said "all Jews should kill Arabs", that would be incitement.

... I am speechless. Jewish Law in this mans twisted and insane mind essentially resembles Gestapo law!
..No ...just no.

They are bastardizing and raping Jewish law, they are an abomination.

When I see stuff like this, I want to grab a pen and tell my congressman that the USA should have nothing to do with religious governments like Iran, Taliban and Israel.

In early 1943 some of the Jews of the Warsaw ghetto staged an uprising against the Nazis. The response of the Nazis was to destroy the ghetto, slaughtering an estimated 300,000 Jews.
71 years on Rabbi Dov Lior is now advocating that the Israeli army slaughter 1.8 million Palestinians in a 21st century version of a ghetto. Why? Because some of those Palestinians staged an uprising against Israel.

Rabbi Dov Lior forgets "NEVER AGAIN"...
... Insisting on a repeat for Gazans.

What a disgraced memory he gives his history...

REMEMBER:
It's never wiping a nation of people off the map when Israel does it.

So according to Rabbi Lior, Jewish law is no different from the anti-Jewish laws passed in the 30's in Germany. The Chosen People, the Master Race, all the same.

The Babylonian Talmud was given by men with false imaginations. Hear the truth from the Almighty, Isaiah, Daniel, Ezekiel, Jeremiah, Jesus Christ, and the Ethiopian Jews!
1 ^ | v · Share >

avikraft → Wayne Burke · a year ago
Many Ethiopian Jews study the Talmud . I once I visited a yeshivah in Jerusalem where much of the student body were frim Ethiopia . The high character and ethicaln behavior of all the students white and black including their wonderful brotherhood and devotion to others could only come from learning such a high spiritual and ethical based work as the talmud .
^ | v · Share >

avikraft → Wayne Burke · a year ago
Xtianity was invented by Paul and the church fathers of Rome . There is not one shred of historical evidence to prove that any of it is true . The talmud contains scientific knowledee such as the exact calculation for the birth of the moon ,the number of stars in the pleidedes as well as how many stars are in our galaxy ,and many other scientific secrets that could only be proven thousands of years later by precise scientific instruments . To have this knowledge without such instruments could only come through divine knowledge ,a knowledgethat was passed down to Jewish religious leaders since Mt.Sinai . While the talmud knew the planets revolve around thesun bacteria cause disease as well as uncleanliness the earth is sphere and there are 7 continents and when one half of the earth is dark and the other light ,,In the middle ages the church considered such teachings heresy for which a person could be burned at the stake

I think now real Rabbis should get together with peace-minded Islamic clergy, of which there are also some, and together pray for peace, or at least cessation of hostilities.

Personally, I believe the USA during World War 2 did justly in Dresden, Hiroshima and Nagasaki.
The strategic attacks ended the war. Afterward, the USA helped Germany and Japan rebuild great nations with tolerant and free citizens.
Seems to me, the reality of war is what Rabbi Lior describes here.
If Palestinian populations want to avoid dying, they would do well to stop their Palestinian leaders from teaching hate and holy war.

When will Merets condemn much more so the incitement by Islamists?
Start by condemning incitement by Arab MKs.
^ | v · Share >

Avi Hirsch · a year ago
Harav Lior didn't incite anything. He specifically said that the army would be able to level Gaza, but he didn't incite any private citizens to do anything.

Technically, an enemy who is trying to kill you isnt your "neighbor".

Regarding the allusion to Jesus, his parable about the "good Samaritan" makes the definition of a "neighbor" clear. Only those individuals who HELP the Jewish community can be considered "neighbors" of the Jewish community.

Leaving Hamas in power in Gaza and bombing it a lot is only going to make them madder when they'll attack Israel next time.

IMPRISONED inside of Gaza. It is very good to be dropping bombs on them from Drones. Your problem starts once you are in range of their Kalashnikov.

Share

skamble · a year ago
Verbal threats are the worst because they don't cause any damage to the enemy but invite revenge later.

Share

Joseph · a year ago
When the USA went into Afghanistan they first carpet bombed the vicinity and then put boots on the ground. When the RAF bombed Hamburg and Berlin during WW II they didn't ask all civilians to leave the area. USA didn't distinguish combatants from civilians in Hiroshima and Nagasaki. When Hamas rains rockets down on Israeli cities they are targetting civilians, but no one seems to notice.

Share

alan bart → Joseph · a year ago
Germany was a serious military power, and quite capable of self defense all the Palestinians have is a few fireworks but Israel still has to bomb their children terrorism of the most heinous kind!

Share

yogabera → Joseph · a year ago
Just kill them all and let Bibi sort them out! Good idea you have there! No one will mind it is sort of like a big veterinary clinic that must be shut down quickly.

Share

Joseph → yogabera · a year ago
You may have misunderstood. Israel warns civilians to leave before the troops enter, unlike the rest of the world who do not make such efforts to limit civilian casualties.
